MANAGEMENT SUMMARY

In 2007 Chicora was retained by the GSA to examine the St. Elizabeths West Campus Cemetery, conduct some brief background research, document the stones present, provided additional boundary research, and provide prioritized recommendations for future action. In 2016, the GSA again requested we visit the cemetery and determine if needs and recommendations had changed since 2007.

Our stone-by-stone review found that 19 of the 219 monuments exhibit noticeable deterioration since 2007. This represents a deterioration of 8.7% of the stones over 9 years, or approximately 1% per year. Damage includes breakage, stones forced out of the ground, and displacement.

(b) (5)

Based on our review of current conditions, we found it necessary to add two additional recommendations. (b) (5)

There is, in addition, an increase in the weathering to the stones that seems in excess of what would be expected over nine years. There is also a noticeable increase in biologicals on the stones. These issues may be related increased pollution, reduction in the forest canopy, or other issues.

A review of the 2007 prioritized recommendations found (b) (5)

(b) (5)

While no additional meaningful historic research has been conducted by the GSA since 2007, this revisit allowed us to return to our 2007 lists and make extensive corrections and updates. Incorrect names or spellings were corrected and death dates were determined for most of those with markers still in the cemetery.

This work allowed us to determine with greater assurance that the stone numbers are not strictly chronological. This suggests that perhaps additional graves were added prior to the assigning of numbers.

Our review also allowed us to significantly update the list of missing stones. In 2007 we thought that there might be about 23. As a result of this more recent work, we can document the presence of 32 markers which were likely in the cemetery, but are no longer present.

If, however, we rely on the missing stone numbers (assuming that all consecutively numbered stones were at one time present), then the cemetery has lost 221 markers over its history. With 224 markers or marker fragments in the cemetery today, this would suggest that over its 150 year history, about half of the markers have gone missing. Of course, it may be that not all of the graves were ever marked.

Introduction

St. Elizabeths, originally a mental health facility for the U.S. military and civilians in the District of Columbia, was long ago divided into two parts by what is today called Martin Luther King, Jr. Avenue, creating the West Campus – west of this road – and the East Campus – east of this road. The General Services Administration (GSA) is currently steward of the West Campus; the East Campus is operated by the District of Columbia.

The cemetery situated on the West Campus is located at the rear boundary of the property, east of South Capitol Street, west-northwest of the original St. Elizabeths buildings, and north of the recently constructed Douglas A. Munro Coast Guard Headquarters Building (Figure 1). What was once a quiet, relatively undisturbed area of woods overlooking the U.S. Naval Station along the Anacostia River is today a Level 5

Homeland Security base.

In 2007 Chicora was retained by the GSA to examine the West Campus Cemetery. The cemetery, as part of the campus, is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. The burial grounds include both military dead from the Civil War, as well as what were termed at the time, “friendless” patients, buried by the hospital “without ceremony.”

As a result of that work we found that over the years the West Campus cemetery failed to receive the care and attention that it both deserved and required. As a result of these years of deferred maintenance, a number of issues – many of them critical and costly – were determined to require the immediate attention of GSA.

This study examines the current condition of the monuments present in the cemetery and explores the recommendations offered in 2007 to determine progress and the need for any modifications in light of the current situation. Our findings reveal that the cemetery continues to receive only limited maintenance. Additional damage is documented to the stones in the cemetery. The vegetation in the cemetery is in poor condition, as is the surrounding fence. Recommendations to ensure public access and to buffer the cemetery from intrusive elements have not been implemented. The cemetery, and its status as a National Historic Landmark site, has not benefited from activities at St. Elizabeths.

Brief Historical Review

The first burial in 1856 was of Mrs. Sarah Fountain, a patient about whom almost nothing is known, and representative of these “friendless” souls. As a pauper she was transferred from the Maryland Hospital to the Mount Hope Institution, and finally to St. Elizabeths, known at the time as the Government Hospital for the Insane. Her burial was without ceremony; it is unlikely a coffin was used; and her grave was marked only by a numbered headboard. These practices were not the result of an overwhelming number of dead who had to be quickly interred. Rather, we speculated it was the result of an “astonishing lack of human dignity and respect for the patients under the institution’s care” (Trinkley and Hacker 2007:20).

While the numbers used on the early headboards were to be recorded in the “case files,” it appears that few of these files remain (Trinkley and Hacker:23), making it virtually impossible to even identify a list of those buried.

The 0.76-acre cemetery was filled by 1873, necessitating a “new cemetery” at the edge of the eastern campus (Trinkley, Hacker and Southerland 2009:23-24) and Sluby (2004:4-12) suggests that by then there were about 600 graves in the western cemetery. Assuming 48 square feet, this would require nearly 0.7 acre – very close to the 0.76-acre cemetery size.

Research also revealed that the hospital only occasionally devoted time to marking graves, providing considerable opportunity for mistakes, lost graves, and misidentified graves. It is essential that we emphasize that no historic map of grave locations or burial log has been identified for the West Campus Cemetery.

It must be remembered that the stones in the cemetery were not available prior to 1873 and it was only after this date that St. Elizabeths administrators began requesting stones. Our previous research found that it was impossible to inter graves in the order represented by the numbering, so clearly the numbering was assigned after the burials, perhaps as stones were being ordered, and does not necessarily reflect their order or positioning. Yet today, the graves are in very rough numerical order. This may mean that (1) the stones were placed without regard to the body, (2) that at some later time the stones were arranged to represent an orderly appearance, and/or (3) with so many stones broken just below grade their current locations do not reflect their historic location. In any case, we do not believe that the stones accurately reflect the individual buried in a particular location.

This is in some sense alluded to by the Hospital’s February 2, 1950 letter to Mr. Charles H. Appich in response to his inquiry concerning the presence of military burials on the grounds. The letter states,

In our older cemetery, maintained from about 1855 to 1880, there are approximately 600 graves. Our records are incomplete, however, and definitive information as to military burials is unfortunately lacking. Two hundred and fifteen headstones in the cemetery are still legible and we believe that they mark the graves of military personnel from civil [sic] War days and perhaps some prior to that period (National Archives, RG 418).

The number of stones has fluctuated over the course of recent history. There were 215 (legible) stones in 1950. In 1982 there were 225 stones. By 1992 there were 209 (Sluby 2004:4-8). In 2007 we identified 219 stones and fragments (Trinkley and Hacker 2007:528-537).

The Markers

All of the stones in the West Campus Cemetery are marble and are about 10-inches in width. This dates their placement prior to 1903, when the stone size was changed from 10- to 12-inches. It also seems to correlate with the letters identified by Sluby (2004) which date from the 1870s and 1880s.

regimental affiliation is included (there is no date of death on any of the stones). The National Cemetery Administration refers to the number above the name as simply “the number of the grave.” These early markers were intended to be set with 12 inches above grade.

These stones, however, were furnished only to Union veterans and it wasn’t until 1906 that Congress approved a subcategory for Confederate dead (P.L. 38, 59th Cong., Chap. 631), having a pointed top, with the shield omitted (the Confederate Cross of Honor was not approved until 1930). This likely dates the iron markers identified in photographs of the St. Elizabeths Cemetery and found during the 2007 research. They were almost certainly used for Confederate burials prior to 1906. Further research might shed further light on this issue.

All of the stones are the conventional “Civil War” type that was first approved for use in 1873. This style has a slightly curved top and a sunken shield in which the inscription appears in bas relief. Typical of the time period, only the name and

Evaluation of 2007 Condition Reports

Part of this project incorporated a stone-by-stone review, using the Monument Inventory appearing as Appendix 2 in Trinkley and Hacker (2007).

Where the stone today was appreciably identical to the 2007 photograph, we made no changes to the 2007 monument recommendations. However, where there has been a change in a monument's overall condition, a revised "Cemetery Field Survey Sheet" has been prepared and these are available in this study in the following pages.

In 2007 we identified 208 stones with names, as well as 11 additional monuments that are fragmentary, illegible, or are metal crosses, for a total of 219 monuments.

Also in 2007 we noted that there had been 23 stones lost and provided a list of those names (Trinkley and Hacker 2007: Table 9).

Changes in Conditions

We discovered that 19 stones evidenced additional damage since the 2007 assessment. This represents a deterioration or damage rate of 8.7% over nine years, or about 1% per year. This is unacceptable, especially as it primarily results from maintenance issues, including damage from dead wood and damage from mowing.

Ten of the stones with noticeable changes can be categorized as out of ground and/or broken. These are likely the result of either mowing or tree damage. Several cases can be directly attributed to mowing damage because of scrapes and additional fragmentation. Several stones also evidence black rubber tire marks.

An additional six stones are today out of the ground, likely the result of mower impacts, although erosion cannot be eliminated as a contributory cause.

One stone, while not out of the ground, evidences a distinct mower strike.

One stone, essentially plumb in 2007, is today badly tilting. This, too, is most likely the result of a mower impact.

One stone was identified as evidencing particularly noticeable additional wear, but was not re-photographed. This is almost certainly the result of its tilt, providing additional exposure to acid rain. Several other stones exhibit similar advanced wear, but were not as pronounced. They clearly document the need to proceed with conservation efforts.

New Stones

During this assessment we identified a new fragment in the upper right corner of the cemetery fence, which we have given the letter designation (in keeping with our past practice) of "N." The stone is a midsection portion and does not contain any name or evidence of a shield. Nevertheless, it may be matched to a pre-existing stone once conservation efforts are undertaken at the cemetery.

A second stone was recently returned to the GSA from an auction house which recognized the stone as stolen government property (The Washington Times, June 11, 2012). Why it was removed remains a mystery, but it is one of the 23 that have gone missing since originally inventoried in the 1990s. It is stone 214, for Jordon Mann, and is included in this assessment.

Changes in Conservation Recommendations

Things often appear differently when examined over time than they do when examined at any particular instant. We have had a decade to evaluate deterioration conditions and ponder on the recommendations offered in 2007. As a result, we have some modifications of our original thoughts.

Revised List of Individuals Identified

In our 2007 assessment of the St. Elizabeths West Cemetery, we included as an appendix a list of those burials we felt we had identified (Trinkley and Hacker 2007:Appendix 3). Since that time additional resources have become available and it seemed appropriate to update that list. It also provided a new opportunity to review the grave numbers that were assigned.

The first data set includes cards of headstone contracts provided by the government for deceased Union soldiers. Most soldiers included in this database died between ca. 1861 and ca. 1903, but the gravestones were erected between ca. 1879 and ca. 1903. Most of our information comes from these cards, but we have noticed that a very large proportion of our St. Elizabeths patients with last names beginning with "A" or "B" are not included, suggesting that this file may have suffered losses over time.

Since our 2007 work Ancestry.com has included Card Records of Headstones Provided for Deceased Union Civil War Veterans, ca. 1879-ca. 1903 (Records of the Office of the Quartermaster General, Record Group 92; National Archives, Washington, D.C.) and the Interment Control Forms, 1928-1962 (Office of the Quartermaster General, 1774-1985, Record Group 92. The National Archives at College Park, College Park, Maryland). These records were always available, of course, but our research budget did not allow for a detailed or intensive search.

The second data set contains cards recording details for members of the U.S. Army interred in national cemeteries. St. Elizabeths must not have been considered a national cemetery since relatively few individuals in the cemetery have cards in this dataset – but there are a few.

Finally, we must also thank those contributing to the Find A Grave website. We discovered that several individuals have gone through our previous work, abstracting photographs for posting. Most importantly, they also seem to have corrected most of our previous errors using the records we have just mentioned.

The new list we have included here retains our original mistakes, allowing easy comparison to our previous report and findings. But, we have added an additional column in which we have made corrections or additions. These include additional name information when the stone only provided initials. It also includes any disagreement between the number we can read on the stone with the number entered on the card. Most importantly, it includes correct spellings in cases where there was so much erosion that we did not correctly record the last name.

In 2007 we also included a list of 23 stones which were no longer found in the cemetery. We have significantly updated and corrected this list. In each case we have included the source of the information to assist researchers in the future. We now have at least 32 monuments that were present at one time, but have now disappeared.

Another way of exploring this concern is to look at the numbers missing from the existing sequence. If we assume that all sequential numbers were assigned and used, then we find that there are about 221 missing numbers – and presumably stones.

Of course, some of the hospital correspondence reveals that they were beginning to confuse numbers between the West and more recent East cemeteries. Thus, it is possible that not all of these numbers were, in fact, used. In any event, the available information suggests that a great many graves in the cemetery may be unmarked.

In 2006 Earth Resources Technology conducted a ground penetrating radar (GPR) survey of the cemetery. Their findings were ambiguous,

The data indicate that there are probably more graves than there are gravestones, but that graves did not have a specific, consistent character on the GPR profiles and thus no specific graves could be identified (letter from James L. Stuby, Earth Resources Technology, to Kyu Jung, GSA, dated September 22, 2006).

Thus, we continue to be able to say only that there are between 500 and 600 burials at the West Campus cemetery, most of which are unmarked.

Order of Stone Numbers

We have previously questioned the idea that the Grave Numbers assigned on the cards and found on the stones, are sequential with death date (Trinkley and Hacker 2007:25). With the additional information now available, we see no reason to modify this view.

While the dates approximately correlate with the grave numbers, they are not precise. Of course, this may be the result of more recent burials filling older voids. Or it may be the result of graves added to the side or other open spaces, perhaps as the result of a tree dying. Or families may have eventually been able to remove remains, leaving an open spot that was filled with a much later burial.

In any case, while it seems clear that grave 1 is far older than grave 400, this doesn't mean that the grave markers can be arranged in strict numerical order.

In fact, one of the sad mysteries remaining at the St. Elizabeths West Cemetery is an understanding of who is actually buried where.

Civilian and Other Deaths

We know the names and death dates for at least two civilians thought to be buried at St. Elizabeths West: Sarah Fontain and Ann M.

Mattingly. Neither has any sort of marker remaining today. Their graves appear lost.

We have previously mentioned that Otto (2013) has reported the iron crosses were associated with civilian burials, although he provides no citation. We must question this logic.

Most fundamentally, none of reported iron crosses have the correct initials or death date for either Fountain or Mattingly. In addition, we have a difficult time believing that the indigent or “friendless” graves would at any point be marked by cast iron crosses with initials and death dates. That seems far too expensive a choice. Alternatively, we know there is a history of cast iron markers for Confederate graves which began probably about 1900 using a Maltese Cross design (although technically these were supplements to the grave and not strictly a grave marker). It may be that this obviously Confederate marker was unacceptable at a government hospital, so an alternative design was chosen. Or, since Confederate markers weren’t approved by Congress until 1906, the iron crosses may pre-date that time.

It may be possible to identify the initials or death dates in the voluminous hospital case files in order to better determine for whom they were designed.

In any event, these crosses can be reproduced by Robinson Iron Works, 1856 Robinson Rd., Alexander City, AL 35010 (<http://www.robinsoniron.com/>). The first step will need to be conservation treatment of the existing cross so it can be submitted to create the pattern for additional castings.

Conclusions

While much money has been spent on the Coast Guard facility, phasing of the project necessitated by limited Congressional funding has resulted in many preservation actions at the cemetery being postponed. It is hoped that this review means additional finances are available and being devoted to the cemetery.

Condition of the Stones

A review of the stones found that 19 of the 219 monuments exhibit noticeable deterioration since 2007. This represents a deterioration of 8.7% of the stones over 9 years, or approximately 1% per year. Damage includes breakage, stones forced out of the ground, and displacement.

Recommendation Progress

A variety of Priority 1, 2, and 3 recommendations were offered in 2007, intended to replace actions within a five-year plan. (b) (5)

Review of Burial Lists

This work provided us with the opportunity to review the lists generated in 2007, taking into consideration a variety of new information. This has resulted in the production of two new lists that we hope will be referenced rather than those produced in 2007.

For those monuments present, we have been able to update the list, providing critical name corrections and adding death dates. We also updated the list with one new stone found in an individual's possession and another stone fragment that has appeared in the cemetery.

We have also prepared a new list of stones which we can document as having been present at one time, but which are now missing. This list consists of 32 monuments – both stones and iron crosses. If we rely on the missing stone numbers (assuming that all consecutively numbered stones were at one time present), then the cemetery has lost 221 markers.

In 2007 we recommended (b) (5)
